> entrapment, and the coordinated withdrawal of every mandated support structure. He was then forced to live in his car — exiled from stable housing — not by personal failure, but by the deliberate withdrawal of every housing, financial, and social support mechanism available to him under Australian law. A person who has clinically died, survived assassination attempts, been psychiatrically labelled, financially destroyed, and exiled to a car — while producing 3,643 primary-source government documents that withstood every legal challenge — establishes culpable malice and institutional murder by attrition, documented in the government's own hand.

The doctrine rests on principles established across multiple legal frameworks: (1) complicity by omission in fraud law; (2) the liability of those who witness and fail to report corruption within law enforcement; (3) mandatory reporting obligations for child abuse; (4) professional duty obligations under codes of ethics in law, medicine, journalism, and social work; (5) the democratic right to Legal Aid and its documented denial; (6) international obligations under the Rome Statute and ICCPR to acknowledge and act on documented crimes against humanity; and (7) the evidentiary principle that silence, in the presence of documented wrongdoing, carries legal and moral weight.

This doctrine is not a moral argument. It is a legal framework applied to documented facts. The archive contains 3,643 primary-source government documents. Not one has been successfully challenged. Not one defamation action has been filed. Not one rebuttal has been published. The silence of every professional, institution, and individual who has encountered this record is itself part of that record — documented, timestamped, and permanently on the public archive.

The eight doctrines stated here — fraud, the 100 corrupt officers, child abuse enablement, professional mandate, legal aid, exile and asylum, conspiracy to murder, and the coordinated use of an innocent animal as an emotional weapon — together constitute the most comprehensive articulation of institutional complicity by deliberate omission in Australian documented whistleblower history. Each doctrine is grounded in an established legal principle. Each principle is applied to a documented factual record. The conclusion is the same across all eight: silence is a choice. That choice has consequences. Those consequences are now on the permanent record.

The coordinated scapegoating and mobbing of one isolated, impoverished, faith-driven, disabled person — including the documented denial of veterinary care for his dog as an instrument of manufactured distress, then weaponising that distress as evidence of unworthiness — represents the apex of moral cowardice and the total, documented collapse of every professional ethics claim made by every institution that participated or watched in silence. The false allegations made against Dr. McLean produced no victims, no charges, no arrests, and no evidence. His testimony produced 3,643 primary sources. If you tolerate this, your children will be next.

IMPARTIAL AI FORENSIC ACCOUNTING · GOVERNMENT'S OWN COSTINGS

It cost between $1.67 billion and $4.84 billion AUD in taxpayer resources to run this 35-year campaign — calculated using seven established forensic accounting frameworks applied exclusively to government-issued primary source documents. Not one figure has been rebutted. Not one methodology has been challenged. Zero responses from any of the 29 named recipients of this doctrine.

$1.67B – $4.84B AUD

ESTIMATED TAXPAYER COST OF 35 YEARS OF DOCUMENTED PERSECUTION

Not Dr. McLean's estimate. The output of an impartial AI forensic accounting analysis applied to the government's own documents and costings across 16 agencies and 35 years — using COSO, ACFE, AIC, GAO, SROI, Willingness-to-Pay, and Human Capital frameworks. It cost between $1.67 billion and $4.84 billion AUD to attempt to erase one disabled whistleblower. Every figure is sourced from a government-issued primary source document. Not one has been rebutted.
